Trimming The Brows

As a general rule it is bad to cut under the arm, you can shave it or take hair where it is not wanted to grow, for the cutting stimulates the will harm you though the hair will grow small hair to greater energy and out again in time, brings it back longer and coarser than before. There are times, though, when tiny hairs grow outside the line of the eyebrow, spoil-not hurt to any real extent.

Thick eyebrows give strength to the face, and usually emphasize the eye itself, but the delicately penciled arch is most becoming to some types of faces. The little hairs that grow down over the lid are unbecoming, and as they are so near the eye itself, it would be useless to have them permanently taken out by the electric needle. These can be clipped off at the skin with a pair of manicure scissors. The points of the scissors should always be kept out away from the face.

If you have the time and money. ugly hairs above the brow can be removed by the needle. Otherwise, the manicure scissors can be brought into use again to keep the unruly hairs clipped off so close that they will be practically invis-ible. Beauty parlors shape eye-brows for half a dollar, but they merely shave off all hair down to a fine arch. This is beautiful for a few days, but in less than a week the old hairs are out again.

The manicure scissors can also be used to clip off the tip ends of the lashes if you wish these to grow thicker.

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded from the original Edsall formulas at the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in Hono-Iulu of Benson, Smith & Co., wholesale distributors, and leading drug stores; a doctor's prescription is not necessary.
